White and Cox Mrs. Harding's Gowns Will Be Secret Until March 4

McAdoo to Have Little Say;
Meeting Called Feb. 17;
To Begin Campaign Plans

By Carter Field
WASHINGTON, Feb. 2—Chairman
George White of the Democratic National Committee to-day announced the personnel of the executive committee as forecast in The Tribune this morning, and called a meeting of the committee for February 17.

The executive committee, which is to conduct a drive for funds for the Congressional campaign two years hence and lay the groundwork for the next Presidential campaign, is primarily a Cox-White controlled organization.

There is a sprinkling of representation for virtually every faction in the party, but the overwhelming majority are men and women who were entirely in sympathy with the nomination of Cox, and with the Cox management. William Jennings Bryan is any one control of the control of the choice of the President-elect's wife. Mrs. Harding had positively announced that no description of her gowns was to be given out now or prior to the actual ceremony. She added that no pictures could be taken ot a member, nor is any one con-picuously identified as a Bryan ad-erent. The McAdoc element is very at least is known, and gendarme blue sparsely represented.

The list shows very clearly what was pointed out in The Tribune this morning—that the Cox-White element intends to keep a firm grip on the national organization of the party right up to the meeting of the national convention in 1924, when friends of the former Governor believe he will not only be entitled to the nomination, but will be able to command it.

The list shows very clearly what was is likely to be the vogue immediately. Her wrap will be small. Her outfit will be small. Her outfit will be simple, compared with the famous dove-patterned triangular gown of a previous reign or the buff velvet and white again costume of the beautiful Dolly Madison.

"Mrs. Harding has no intention to the new committee will turn." Dolly Madison.

"Mrs. Harding has no intention the organization.

Every Night at Theater

"Mrs. Harding knows just what she wants," one designer declared, after leaving her. "She has a keen realization of what is becoming and suitable. She is perfectly conscious that as First Lady of the Land it is necessary for her to exercise particular care in the selection of her wardrobe. She wants her outfit to te dignified, distinctive and suitable to her position and she will have nothing, else."

Theater boxes have been taken for every night this week. Mrs. Harding's it taste is said to run to the lighter sort of entertainment. She is slated for "The Greenwich Village Follies" and the Hippodrome, and her first public appearance since coming to New York was at "Sally," where she passed untrocognized, although seated in the front of the most prominent box. Everybody Knows the Waldorf

New Yorkers; Americans north and south, east and west; travelers from every world capital; men and women from every clime-all know the Waldorf-Astoria.

They know it as an institution; its traditions; its distinctive character; and the high type of service accorded its guests. Finally, they know it as "The Aristocrat of Hotels."

In the Waldorf-Astoria there is a barber shop of similar reputeone of a well-established group, the Terminal Barber Shopswhich may with equal verity be termed the "Aristocrats among Barber Shops."

You will find that Terminal service is extraordinary. It is rendered by men and women who, through interminable training, have been developed to a degree of skill and experience previously unknown in the barber business. And every facility essential to the finer type of service has been provided.

There are many exclusive Terminal features which you will be glad to know about. For example: the individual sterilized hair brushes, combs, shaving brushes, razors, towels and manicuring instruments. Our extensive clientele permits us to offer these extra features without additional expense to you.

Come to the Waldorf-Astoria, or visit any of our other shops, and avail yourself of this extraordinary service, which comes to you at ordinary prices. While being served you will enjoy perfect comfort. And when you step from the chair you will experience that keen satisfaction born of faultless performance by those who serve you.
